4 ESTATES OF LORDS.

A GLIMPSE OF THE GREAT COUNTRY HOMES OF TITLED ENGLISHMEN.

How a Palace in the Town and a Paradisc in the Country Are Maintained-Warnings to Trespassers-A Few Crit-

The creat country homes of rich and titled Englishmen are something staggering. Almost anybody has sense enough to know that dukes and lesser gentry live in better style than most folks but bow many who have not seen one of these estates realize their immensity? How many chance to know that an English nobleman often resides in an ediffee whose main door is two miles from the front gate? Do not begin comparing such a place mentally with single holdings in America like the old Sullivan farm in Illinois. There isn't even this unction for Yankee pride for these homes are not farms at all, but vast inclosures of garden, field, hill, vale, meadow, copse, and forest solely for the enoyment of the owners and their families. Nothing is usually "raised" on them except what may be used by the immediate residents, their servants, and stock.

The income for the maintenance of such a home comes from outside rents, for the possessor of a castle set in the midst of a private park ten square miles in extent may also own a huge slice in the heart of London, half a dozen villages in neighborhood of his home and two thirds of a county in Ireland. It is with the enormous rentals squeezed out of these that a palace in town and a paradise in the country quite as large and probably much finer than the original Eden are I have driven through parks owned by plain misters; one actually be-longed to a Smith—it was "Colebrook," near Tunbridge Wells—larger than Lincoln park, while I have also been in the domains of more distinguished parties whose grounds, with the adjoining demesne, would afford more than room enough for the whole city of Chicago. Eridge Park, in the heart of Kent, home of the Marquis of Abergavenny, just seen, is, with the accompanying contiguous property, seven miles long by five wide. The pleasure part alone contains 3,500 acres

NOT FOR THE PUBLIC.

This and similar estates are not open to the public, though portions of many of them can be seen on stated days. They are entirely for the comfort of my lord and family and such friends as they may choose to invite to walk, ride, drive, shoo and otherwise disport therein. Some of and otherwise disport therein. Some of the gunning grounds, left wild only that his lordship and cronies may in fall and winter pop over the tenderly preserved pheasant and grouse, are extensive enough to build towns upon. How would the American sportsman, accustomed to ing right into any farmer's woods rainfithing right into any tarmer's woods and fields in quest of his prairie chicken and partridge, like that? A little figuring and inquiry make it possible to learn who is the steward in charge of almost any one of these grand inclosures, and from him admission to the parks is usually obtained by the otherwise hearts duly lettainable. But otherwise boards duly lettered are up everywhere, warning away the trespasser and giving him careful notice that if he is a man he will be prosecuted: if a cat, destroyed. The buildings in the vicinage belonging to the estate are often marked by the crest or else the initial of the owner, and sometimes the "A" for Abergavenny, for Beaufort, "C" for Cairnes, "D Devonshire, and so on through the whole peerage alphabet; may be seen upon a majority of the cottages, ale houses other structures for miles around. friend was telling me that on his first visit to the English country he struck into neighborhood-a Grafton, Greenville, Gainsborough or Gower, it doesn't matter which. He didn't know at first what it stood for, but from the magnitude and splendor of the estate, the universal deference accorded to its unseen owner and the initial letter, all combined, he thought perhaps he had at last reached the place where God lived,

A FEW CRITICISMS. Of the extent and beauty of such an estate as Eridge, for instance, its scores of tervants in eastle, gardens, parks and leids, its imposing residence and magnifient surroundings, it is next to impossible courtesy of admission with criticism, but few who behold its vastness and grandeur can help thinking of this and like domains that they are too much to be held in perpetuity for the personal delectation of single families. No one household has the capacity to enjoy such colossal homestead while rent racked tenants fight their hard lives on pinched Irish farms or in the

why not cut up these gigantic home-steads and rent or sell the bulk of them to other people before the 35,000,000 sonls of England, now living on an area not much larger than the state of Illinois, weary of such inequality! Of all brutes the Anglo Saxon, once convinced that he is wronged is the worst an inscrutable Providence is known to have yet fashioned. Who can say that some day, sick of grinding a hopeless life along in the country hovel or with a crowd of wretched families like his own in the murky tenement of a Lon-don alley, while my lord keeps merely for his pleasure grounds fertile hills and valleys which can only be seen across with a leys which can only be seen across wanter spy glass or compassed by a hard day's walk, this same brute may not rise in his ugly might and scrawl a new page of his-tory beside which the bloody record of the

MYSTERY OF RED HAIR.

THE CONCLUSIVE DEMONSTRATION MADE BY AN ARTIST.

No Such a Thing as Roal Red Hair-The Support Hondod Maiden le Never Stupid. Glowing Locks on the Stage-In Literature

"Red hair! There's no such thing!" exclaimed a young and well known artist who has passed many days in sunny Italy the other afternoon as he prom-enaded up Fifth avenue with an equally well known swell. They had just come from lunching at Deimonico's at the swell's expense, and the latter had just remarked, after the manner of his kind: By Jove, just look at that wed headed girl crowssing ovah heah; she gives me a troke, dontcher know."

"Why don't people call colors by their proper names** went on the exasperated artist as they passed the Brunswick. "But, my deah fellah dontcher know what Mawy Anderson says, 'A wose by any other name would smell as sweet,' and if wed bair isn't west why it looks wed all the same," and as this logic seemed irrefutable there was silence until the two men disappeared within the por-tals of the Knickerbscker club. The reporter, who had overheard this onversation, determined to unsolve the mystery of red hair, and at dusk sought the artist in his studio to find out what color red hair was. The artist was look-ing picturesque and kind, and was pleased to mix on his palette three different shades of red, three of yellow and three of brown

TWO OR THREE COLORS MIXED. "Now." said he, with the air of the college professor who pauses to catch the class with some startling question, "point me out the color that is like red hair."
The reporter couldn't do it. He bovered about the orange color as the small boy around the circus tent, but could not touch it. He almost singled out one of the sickly looking browns, but the reds be kipped entirely.

Give it up. "Thought you would," said the artist, condescendingly. "What people call red hair is a mixture of two or three colors, according to the shade of red. Now, look here. If I dab my finger in this yellow and mix it with that red, what do I gets" Why, exactly the color of hair the girl

"I told you so," said the artist, "and don't let any one ever convince you that there is such a thing as real red hair. Call it red if you choose, but don't think of it as the same color as a train lantern or a coaching parasol, because you will be way off. Adelaide Neilson had red hair, you know, one of the most beautiful tints, and Willie Winter spoke of it as 'the burnish-ed gold that floated around her royal head,' so if you choose to take that term you will be nearer the truth."

It is said by those who ought to know, and no one has contradicted the state ment, that a red haired girl is never a stupid girl. She is always quick of speech and quick of action. Red hair brings with it a quick intelligence and generally great sensibility. When it comes with blue eyes and brown brows and lashes the owner is of a sentimental turn of mind and usually very musical: with brown eyes and dark lashes the red headed girl is noted for her beauty of complexion—gen-erally an ivory white—her love of exercise, and is very frequently endowed with great

A STRONG, EMOTIONAL NATURE. Red hair always goes with a strong, emo-tional nature, and the red haired girl laughs and cries at the theatre when her black and yellow haired sisters sit silent. She is a creature quick to anger, easy to please, a lovable darling when she likes you, but sharper than a two edged sword and as bitter as early gooseberries when she doesn't. "Who are our red headed girls and

Those on the stage are well known. Mrs. James Brown Potter is perhaps the most interesting. Her hair is considered her greatest beauty. It isn't the "reddish" red hair, but it looks like bronze, touched with a tint of golden flame here and there. Mary Anderson, who has light brown hair, by the way, raves over Mrs. Potter's hair and wishes hers was like it.

Kate Claxton has what is called real red hair—the bricky, carroty, dark red tint—but it is not a bit unbecoming. It is so soft and silken, so plentiful and curls in loose ringlets, and then it has been such salvation to her, so she says, for when fire meets fire they run apart, and she owes her miraculous escapes from burning owes her miraculous escapes from burning hotels to her ruddy hair. In the literary world red hair is in-tensely admired. Emerson loved it, James Whitcomb Riley has written many poems on it and in one calls it "nut brown hair with a golden gleam," and Dante Gabrielle Rosetti's wife, who died when very young, had hair of a yellow red, long and curling. He buried all his poems with her, but the friends who had wished for his fame had them removed a few years afterwards and found that the beautiful red hair had grown and twined itself all about the

In our literary world of to-day there are many women with red hair.

In the social world there are many red neaded girls and women who are belles and beauties.

Among the great army of girls who earn their living in the large dry goods stores there are many with red hair which society belies would give a great deal of money to possess. A lady artist gives a few hints as to what colors red headed people should wear:

"Those who have hair verging on brown
